Dear Professor Savas:

I am writing to invite you to become a reviewer for Mathematical Reviews.

As you probably know, Mathematical Reviews covers the world research literature in mathematics by means of critical reviews. The literature is growing rapidly and we need additional reviewers to keep up with this growth, speed up the reviewing process, and improve the quality of the reviews by having specialists in all fields.

We know from your publications that your qualifications and research interests are very much the kind we need. We would be very pleased to have you work with us.

If you are interested and have the time for reviewing, please send us the information requested on the enclosed sheet, either by e-mail to mathrev@ams.org or by filling out the sheet and returning it to us. We ask our reviewers to be prepared to handle one article a month on the average (this rate is rarely attained in practice, although we sometimes send out several items at one time). A description of your interests in your own words is the most useful, preferably supplemented by the relevant numbers from the 2000 Mathematics Subject Classification (MSC2000) (see www.ams.org/msc).

We hope that your institution will cover the cost of returning reviews to us (by airmail if sent from overseas). Please indicate on the enclosed sheet if you are not able to obtain this support and will therefore require that return postage be included with items sent to you for review.

We have a particular need for reviewers who are able to read items that are written in Slavic languages, Chinese, etc.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Yours sincerely,

Jane E. Kister
Executive Editor
